DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The abstract of the disclosure is objected to because the phrase "clock rate" on line 6 is not the correct phrase to use. It should be replaced with "data transfer rate," or something similar. Correction is required. See MPEP § 608.01(b).

Claim Objections

Claim 3 is objected to because of the following informalities: The phrase "clock rate" on line 6 is not the correct phrase to use. It should be replaced with "data transfer rate," or something similar. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2, 4-7, 9, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Robles in view of Steer.

Referring to claim 1, Robles discloses a system for interleaving MPEG video data with data comprising: a MPEG video source that produces a MPEG video data stream at a clock rate determined by said MPEG video source (column 15, lines 45-49; figure 15), wherein said MPEG video data stream is comprised of MPEG video data packets and null data packets (figure 16A); a media access control device that receives said MPEG video data stream, replaces each of said null data packets with a data frame to produce an interleaved MPEG data stream, and transmits said interleaved MPEG data stream (column 16, lines 14-21) at said clock rate determined by said MPEG video source (column 2, lines 43-47; Note: preventing the system from reducing the data rate is interpreted as being equivalent to transmitting at the same data rate as it is received).

Robles does not disclose a system where DOCSIS data is interleaved into an MPEG stream.

Steer discloses a system where DOCSIS data is interleaved into an MPEG stream (column 10, lines 2-4).

At the time of the invention it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to use the system disclosed by Robles to interleave DOCSIS data into an MPEG stream as taught by Steer. The motivation would have been that the data being interleaved into the MPEG data stream is IP data, which would be used in DOCSIS transmissions. Also adding the features taught by Steer would allow the system to interrupt certain packets that weren't time sensitive to allow for time sensitive packets to be sent first (Steer: column 2, lines 17-24).

Referring to claim 2, Robles discloses a system of claim 1, further comprising a downstream modulator that receives said interleaved MPEG data stream (column 17, lines 28-34) at said clock rate determined by said MPEG video source (column 2, lines 43-47).

Claims 4, 5, and 6 are rejected on the same grounds as claim 1.

Claim 7 is rejected on the same grounds as claim 2.

Claim 9 is rejected on the same grounds as claim 2.

Claim 10 is rejected on the same grounds as claim 2.

Claims 3 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Robles in view of Steer as applied to claims 1, 6, and 7 above, and further in view of Hiroshima.

Referring to claim 3, Robles in view of Steer does not disclose a system of claim 1, wherein said MPEG video source provides said MPEG video data stream at a clock rate less than 13.5 megabytes per second.

Hiroshima discloses a system of claim 1, wherein said MPEG video source provides said MPEG video data stream at a clock rate less than 13.5 megabytes per second (column 7, lines 40-44).

At the time of the invention it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to transmit the data at 1.536 Mbps as taught by Hiroshima in the system disclosed by Robles and Steer. The motivation to do this would have been to lower the data transfer rate to allow the data to be transmitted on low bandwidth systems.

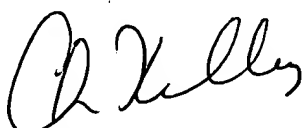

Claim 8 is rejected on the same grounds as claim 3.
